

InclusiGardens Newsletter

#4

InclusiGardens: Digital and Sustainable Pathways to Social Inclusion through Urban Gardening is an Erasmus+ Small-Scale Partnership project in the field of adult education, bringing together three organisations: Društvo za permakulturo Slovenije (Slovenia), Pučko otvoreno učilište Čakovec (Croatia), and eVRgreen Studio (the Netherlands).

Project's main goal is to empower urban dwellers, particularly those who are marginalised or vulnerable, by offering accessible, hands-on resources for sustainable urban micro-gardening. InclusiGardens focuses on fostering social inclusion, promoting zero-waste principles, and supporting community engagement through open educational materials and collaborative learning. Newsletters like this one serve to share the latest developments, highlight practical project outcomes (like the InclusiGardens Curriculum), and provide updates on the implemented activities and resources available to the wider public.

Game on, gardeners!

As the IncludiGardens project officially comes to an end, we look back with pride at the results created throughout this journey. The project consortium developed a zero waste cookbook, a toolkit on growing your own micro-urban garden, gamification strategies for making green education more engaging, and a curriculum for future urban gardeners. As an added bonus, three vibe-coded serious games were also created to support interactive and playful learning! These resources will remain as a lasting contribution to greener, more inclusive adult education.

Curriculum

Support future urban gardeners with the IncludiGardens Curriculum! Created for adult educators and learners, this document brings together sustainability, inclusion, and practical micro-gardening knowledge in one structured learning pathway. It helps learners build confidence in growing food in small urban spaces while developing greener habits and a stronger connection to their environment. Whether used in organised learning or community-based activities, the curriculum offers a solid foundation for meaningful and accessible green education.
